

Subject: : Conservation

Topic: : An alternative to hydro fracking?

Re: An alternative to hydro fracking?

Author: : franklin

Date: : 2012/8/15 8:28:46

URL:

Quote:

bikerfish wrote:

of course, they are also "established" forms of energy, the technology to drill and gather is proven, the refining is proven, and there are thousands of industries that use the byproducts for thousands of other things.

that's why it's so funny when people in this country talk about energy independence, it's all BS, nothing more than marketing to get people on the side of the nat gas industry. Importing oil is not going to change one bit, no matter how much nat gas we produce.

There has already been a sizable change in imports over the last few years.

NPR no less

Why couldn't this trend continue?