

Subject: : Conservation

Topic: : Break

Re: Break

Author: : Troy

Date: : 2012/8/17 15:11:49

URL:

Quote:

Swattie87 wrote:

Speaking of Herons...any one else seem to think their population is sky rocketing. Pretty much every stream I fish, except for the high elevation/high gradient tiny Brookie runs seems to have a resident Heron population now. I don't always see the bird(s) themselves, but their tell tale tracks are there on the streambank. Maybe I just never took a notice before, but I used to remember them just being on larger streams.

I see them everywhere now. I was just talking about this the other day. I never remembered seeing them when I was young. Now, it's rare when I don't see them. This is at least my observation in SE PA. I don't really recall seeing many in the state college area or north central PA.