Not to dredge up an old post, but I was in the park the other day with my kids and was "trout spotting". I saw several browns holding their position by the frog hopper thingamajiggy. They had nice spot patterns, although I couldn't get a good enough look to see if they were streambred or not. I enjoyed watching the baitfish rise to a hatch of something around dusk as the stream started to come alive.

I was mildly distracted by the creek until I remembered I was there to have fun with my kids!
