

---

Subject: : Warm Water & Salt Water Fly-Fishing

Topic: : Flat fishing Sth Fla & Cancun

Re: Flat fishing Sth Fla & Cancun

Author: : pcray1231

Date: : 2012/8/20 19:44:53

URL:

I have very little experience fishing the salt (some surf/piers and a few charters). And none with the fly (which will soon change).

So basically, nothing at all like what you are doing. Take it for what it's worth. But overall, my experiences have been that finding fish is difficult. It's a lot of water. But once you find em, they are ravenous.

Some of the most fun I ever had was hauling in schoolie dolphin (mahi mahi) on a charter. We even got a blue marlin that day. But the dolphin on light tackle was much more fun, IMO. Trolling, trolling, trolling, bam, every rod on the boat goes down simultaneously. Mate's handing rods around, trying to prevent tangles, meanwhile chumming and getting light action spinning rods out. By the time we got all the rods landed, you look behind the boat, and there's just 100 or so fish stacked up against the stern. You could toss that rod 100 yards away and one would be on it in an instant. All you have to do is "hit water".

Mass craziness. 6 sports on the boat. Pretty much a constant "6 header" till the school is gone or your limited out.