

---

Subject: : Fly Fishing Locations

Topic: : Wild trout streams in chester county pa

Re: Wild trout streams in chester county pa

Author: : pcray1231

Date: : 2012/8/23 12:27:59

URL:

I haven't lived here that long, and I haven't had much time since I did. Every time I get out I make a big trip of it.

But I do want to start exploring Chesco's streams more. I know there's at least 1 guy on here that's given me some information and has really explored the little brookie streams in the county, and had some luck.

Quote:

I use the class A, B, C lists and have had better results in finding wild trout streams.

Umm, they don't publish the B, C, and D lists. Only A, as well as wilderness trout waters. And frankly, most of my favorites throughout the state are NOT class A, many are class C or D, officially. But those classes aren't a great representation of what's happening out there. These small streams cycle so much with year classes, A one year, D the next, B the next, etc. Not ot mention longer term changes. A survey in 1976 just is not a good indication of what's going on today. Class A draws people.