Ditto to what pennsadventures said (and cool that all four posters here so far are Lancastrians!).

Octoraro warms by summer time. There's a slight chance that a fish or two could hold over in some of the deeper holes, if there happened to be a cool spring there, but I wouldn't bet a whole lot on that.

They'll put something like 300 fish in during the fall; I don't know that I've ever fished it then, so I don't know if its stocked up in the woods or down in the meadow.

Unfortunately, its a marginal stream at best for trout.
