I guess another question I might ask also is how does everyone feel about it?

I enjoy the aerial fight they put up and like catching them, but I do not want to see the population get too high.

Maybe at some point in the future a creel limit on bows might need to be put in place, like the south fork of the Snake river in Idaho. This would keep it in check. The population might never get too high, who knows. Its just something I thought about while on the water.
