I must admit that number you caught today is striking. The only time I hooked into that many is in the DHALO section between the stocking and harvest time.

The highest ratio I saw on the lower river is 3:1 (browns to bows). most of the time its more like 5:1 I think the idea that these numbers are elevated by planting, makes sense.

If you have an opinion about bows on the J, post them on the LJRA forum or visit the monthly meeting held in the tyrone library on the second tuesdays of each month at 7 pm to raise the issue. They debate the pros and cons of enhancing the bows population on the river from time to time .
