
Subject: : Fly Fishing Locations

Topic: : Valley Creek Info?

Re: Valley Creek Info?

Author: : englishprof

Date: : 2012/8/24 19:17:26

URL:

The myth that this stream gets "pounded" is really getting old. I've fished it more than anyone on PAFF this year. Last Saturday, I fished a popular and easily accessible section and didn't see another guy from 7:00 A.M. to Noon. Sunday, another stretch less popular and again nobody.

The water temperature is fine - 62 each day early and up to about 65 at Noon. You will find some others in the Park.....but six.....please!!!! Plenty of water for that many. There are some on here that will try to tell you that it's like Erie for Steelhead - elbow to elbow. It's not. Others will tell you the water is too warm. It's not.

Doc.....PM me if you want meet there on Sunday. I wouldn't dare post specific sections here. After all, it really is a "secret" stream that's difficult to find. I will say this.....if you're looking for an easy place to catch a bunch of fish, Valley isn't the place. That's to scare off some the wild hordes who might be there after reading this.

By the way, the riparian buffer along the entire stream is fantastic. Some natural and some due to the work of some dedicated volunteer organizations to which I should at least donate. I fall short there especially since I now spend so much time on the stream. I'll correct that. I've seen no section where storm water runs directly from paved areas into the creek. None.