I would prefer a good mix. Its just something that I plan on keeping an eye on over the next few years while I am home visiting/fishing. The J is an amazing brown trout fishery, and I hope it stays that way. There is nothing wrong with the mix of bows in it right now, I feel that the bows are a great compliment to the browns.

I enjoy hearing others opinions and experiences on this topic.

I am pretty sure there isn't much(if at all) illegal stocking going on on the J...

Spruce gets stocked heavily which is where the bigger fish come from. Even if it was illegally stocked, that still does not show where the wild bows came from. There are definitely wild bows in the J, and once you hook them they are scrappy little fellows that really put up a fight.

3 to 4 years ago, it was a treat to latch into a bow on the J. Like I said, this year its just become almost expected.
