I'll second that advice and add not to over look those parallel to the beach sloughs and troughs that a lot of those beaches have. I have also had a lot of luck in a kayak just past the breakers. I have one but that aren't that much to rent for a day or so. You can strip and drift clousers all day from there. Had the most luck with olive over white and olive over orange. I would think blue or red over white would be good too. Bouncing them off the bottom in the surf can produce flounder but line control can be a pain.

this is a great site: <http://outerbanksflyfishing.com/forum/>
