It is mostly about the beautiful location. Quote:

Also, as a general rule (to which there are some exceptions) much of the best wild trout fishing in Michaux is within stocked sections of streams as the non-stocked streams tend to be very small not to mention often very thick with rhododendron or highly acidic.

I have spent a lot of time south of 30 and had a lot of fun with tiny delicate brookies in a small trickle of a stream. I like to think I know a lesser known "hoptspot" or two in a stocked area mixed with a rare few decent size wild. (you hit the nail on the head fishidiot, with my limited experience in the area this hold true). I love to explore, and I will be heading north to try Toms and Mountain creek at least before those brookies start spawning. Oh, and what causes that acidity in the area? Thanks Fishidiot
