If you're interested in learning more about that technique read Kelly Galloup's 'Modern Streamers for Trophy Trout'...

He's a firm believer in that method... big ugly flies slapped down and fished fast. He says that it brings out the predatory instinct in big trout much like bass or other predatory fish.

I personally think it works pretty well under the right conditions... low clear water not being one of those conditions.

What you do on the privacy of your home waters is up to you, but when we get to the Smokies, there will be no "slapping the hamster."
