I was up that way yesterday, fishing a small trib in the Cedar Run area. On the way up, all the tribs were clear, and not very high.

But Pine Creek was very muddy, even though its flow was not real high either, around 200 cfs at the Cedar Run gauge. I thought that it was odd that it hadn't cleared up more by yesterday afternoon.

Someone said the muddy water was coming down Babb Creek. Is that just because they got more rain up there, or because of a lot of disturbed land from the old mines?

Does Babb Creek typically run muddier than other Pine tribs?

I don't think Babb Creek runs muddy. During the high water of early spring it will have an unhealthy grey or blue cast.

Another report said the mud was coming from Dixie Run. Dixie is a small trib to Babb Creek.
