

---

Subject: : Stream Reports

Topic: : Youghiogheny River, Fayette/Somerset Co. 9/08/2012

Re: Youghiogheny River, Fayette/Somerset Co. 9/08/2012

Author: : YoughRiverGuide

Date: : 2012/9/12 21:48:24

URL:

Fishidiot: infertile? Based on two samplings? Obviously. . .

You are right though. Those rainbows you guys caught look to be the products of an infertile river. Skinny. Malnourished. Poor fighters.

Oh, wait, is that right?

Not for nothing, but a person might expect that a guy who holds himself out to be a bit of an expert might be a slightly more astute observer of the details, i.e., fat, healthy fish that fight hard and that are so keyed in on a specific food source that they ignore streamers.

Seriously though--you couldn't have picked two worse spots to sample bugs. And the rest of the details tell the story. In fact, your two samplings, if anything, when compared with the rest of what you experienced, are anomalous, and should be dismissed as such.

Glad you guys had a good day on the river though.

See below pic for a regular scene from this infertile river - I count seven riseforms plus two fish in the air, conservatively.

Attach file:

---

 an afternoon rise.jpg (148.92 KB)

