There's a small silted slow moving stream behind my mothers property. Its the size of a small trout stream but it is entirely warm water. It is mostly low and wide with not many holes deeper than 18 inches.

I started fishing the stream shortly after buying my two weight rod. Having an ultra lightweight fly rod really opens up fishing opportunities. You find yourself fishing waters others wouldn't think to fish,..... and enjoying yourself.

Caught this guy today after taking a little hike and scouting a few spots. Put up a really nice fight on the fly rod.

P.S. not only are larger fallfish good fighters, they are also very selective feeders and spook easy.
