I miss the Yough. I haven't fished it in a good while. But there are certain areas where the fish consistently rise. There are hatches, but rarely of the blizzard type. This has been improving in my opinion over even the last ten years that I've been sampling it with the long-rod.

I don't know if "infertile" is the perfect description, but it certainly shouldn't be thought of as "fertile" either. I suggest "relatively infertile" as an artful compromise.
