Nice report pcray...glad you were able to get some "pullage." My tactics were more or less identical to yours, just from the other side of the inlet. I guess the Croakers must have taken off since I was down there. I woulda traded a few Croakers for a legal Fluke though...nothing but shorts when I was there.

As far as the surf goes, probably a good move to skip it...I don't think you missed much. My brother was in Fenwick Island this past week and he said he tried to fish the surf one morning...he was tossing 4 oz's and said it almost immediately was winding up back on the shore. Pretty sure there were a couple hurricanes out in the open Atlantic churning up the waves last week.
