troutbert, the mouths of the streams in the lake at Erie are hotspots early in the season and decent places to fish throughout the runs. Moving up and down the beach could result in an occasional hookup, but I think most of the fish "bask" in the water entering the lakes, concentrating them, therefore, at the mouths.

I do not like fishing in the lake as much as in the streams because of the surf. When the winds are from the south, or better, southeast, and make the lake calm like glass, it can be very fun, even though very crowded, too.
