I have learned some great things from this site. There is a lot of useful information and people willing to help the the new guy trying to get started, to the more experienced angler needing a technical question answered.

DKile, this is your site and you can run it as you please. I will disagree with you and others on your open door policy when it comes to freely sharing just any stream on PAFF. It could be done in a more responsible manner IMO. I for one have seen the the creek in question go down hill these past couple years. Not every stream can handle the pressure this site directs to it. This streams decline is a direct result of people blabbing about it on PAFF that I can guarantee you.

So why there are many positives about this site there is definitely one big negative.
