So in typical fashion Mother Nature through a curveball and some pretty significant rain did materialize in the forecast. Looks like the area we'll be staying and fishing in got about 2 inches of rain from this system. I'm thinking it was steady, soaking, and long enough in duration that it shouldn't be all 100% run-off. Stream gauges in the area are spiking now, so it looks like we'll catch them on the fall. Should be plenty of water in the small streams for this weekend now, but thanks for the Smallie advice on Pine gang. We may still give that a try too depending on conditions by Sunday.
