Thought I saw Mt. Pocono got 8 inches? Can't wait to get down into the Gorge and see how many fish survived the unnecessarily hot water. I remember watching those 2000+cfs flows in early season just plow down that river instead of being held back. Prior to stalking in April, there were good numbers of fish through that 20 miles of public property. Granted last summer was historical rain totals and cooler temps, but.....Fill out those survey cards, there is no way to accurately shock that river, I think those fish move 10s of miles throughout the year.

Do rafters appreciate that almost 30 miles of that is public property? who knows, hope so.
