I don't understand people in general when it comes to respecting people's property. It is not a difficult concept and I was brought up to always respect people, as well as their property. I just don't get it. I mean it doesn't cost anything to say "please" or "thank you" yet people use these words like they are on a budget of them. If these people (and let's be fair, it is not only FFers that park there) got their car blocked in the way some block his driveway, they'd go bananas themselves.
