

Subject: : Fly Fishing Locations

Topic: : Asaph Run

Asaph Run

Author: : Swattie87

Date: : 2012/9/24 21:09:36

URL:

Drove by this stream on the way home from my Tioga/Potter trip this weekend. It was dry (I mean bone dry, not even a stagnant puddle to be seen) near its mouth at the bridge on Marsh Creek Rd. Although flows on the small streams were pretty low up there despite the recent rains, I saw many streams with much smaller watersheds than Asaph with plenty of water in them. Anyway, I drove upstream toward the picnic area and found the stream flowing along just fine. For the local guys...assume there is a sinkhole or something similar? Is this normal for this stream during lower flows?