

Subject: : Fly Fishing Locations

Topic: : Posted Land on Penns Creek

Re: Posted Land on Penns Creek

Author: : butch645xzm

Date: : 2012/9/25 14:50:01

URL:

There is no easements in that area, it is all private. Getting PFBC to try is pretty much useless, that is why when they try and change rules landowners just get together and threaten to post it all. My friend that has a camp has been friends with the guy on the other side of the bridge and he told him he couldn't even access through his ground. They have been friends for a long time. He said it was nothing personal but he was shutting it down until he gets his point across to rails to trails and anyone else trying to use his ground. If he said you could walk through you should feel lucky.

All the ground is owned by private landowners, whom are all very easy to get along with and are more than willing to let you fish through. The problem is people abusing and taking advantage. You let a couple people park on your ground and the next thing you know they bring friends and you have a parking lot in your yard. If everyone would just use your head and common sense there would not be so many issues. RESPECT is all that is necessary.