Whats better about the method in NJ is that there's no special date/time, no special place, no special trip required, and no special notification needed to get people prepared to participate, no special website to get the needed information from, no special anything.

They put these drop-off boxes near pharmacies so people can see them and become aware of them. People can just take their stuff over the next time they shop there. If they forget- they see the box again, and sooner or later remember take their stuff at some later time they go shopping after that.

It's way more convenient & easy, and people actually know about it.
