Found this book, by Howell Raines, at a local farmers market.

It must have been sitting for years because I've picked it off the same shelf a half dozen times in the past year before finally paying $5 and taking it home.

So far, not bad. Writings about the Letort, Bob Clouser, the Susky, Breeches, Vince, Charley New Cumberland and other mentions of Pennsylvania.

I've only read a bit,

Chapter 30;

Living Legends IV: The Genius of Three Mile Island

The author discusses Bob Clouser and his Clouser's Deep Minnow. Discusses fishing with Bob and describes how Bob says the fly came about. I could also relate to specific areas of the Susquehanna that are described and a mental image of the river comes to mind. Pretty cool. He describes the abandoned Bethlehem Steel mill and I could clearly picture the area being familiar with it.
