Its just an observation I have noticed sites that have real names seem to be more business and less BS. Guys don't burn spots and troll on those sites simply because they don't have the internet muscles that come with a fake name.

Sorry I really feel that IMHO this site could be better if it was that way. I know it won't change.

Be careful what you wish for.....

I've used my real name on a site and when I Google myself, all the posts I've made going back for years comes up in the search. It's not a problem, but anyone with bad intentions can glean a ton of info about a person by doing a simple search. Not a good idea, IMO.
