No problem Jack. If anyone else read the early post to infer that Penns wasn't in good, fishable conditions they lost out on a good opportunity. Saturday conditions were likely even better. I didn't see another fisherman all day Sunday in middle of the No Kill. For a lot of years I struggled to get reliable water condition reports for Penns. Then the USGS site came up and while that helps, clarity can't be determined by interpretation of flow rise or drop. Penns is unique and forecasts of its fishing conditions can't necessarily be connected to conditions elsewhere. You'll be wrong much of the time. That's why a visual is most valuable, but even then we all have our own feelings about which conditions fish best.
