The PFBC has come out with the 2012 Young of the Year smallmouth bass survey for 2012. The YOY survey is intended to reflect spawning success of SMBs for that year. The short version is that the North Branch had a good year; the West Branch had a poor year. The main stem was good above Harrisburg but poor below it - at least by the standards of what has been seen in the last decade since the bass crash in the main stem and lower river. All things considered, it was probably about what one would expect. YOY counts can vary a lot by year with depending on weather and water levels.
