I think the right amount of weight and water depth is the ticket. I remember one day fishing a deep slow moving pool. I use a strike indicator and after countless tries letting it drift through, I moved the indicator way up, like twice the depth of the pool, and added two BB sized split shots about 8 inches from the fly. Big rainbow on the first cast after that! In high murky water I like them big, flashy, and with rubber legs. Bass love big wooly buggers with rubber legs too.
