Over the weekend after all that rain was using a white conehead bugger with rubber legs. Standing at a corner with fast rapids on my right and on my left a section of water very still with the rapids rushing by. Cast the bugger with no indicator let it drift down and when line got tight the water moved it into the calm water and stripped it back to me. First strip back landed a 14" largemouth bass. There is no wrong way to use a bugger.
