gosh there is not enough advice here so here's some more... it is good to cast in the yard for fun and to get used to gear, but take a tape measure out there if you will yard cast a brookie rod...

... the 10-25' casts you really use on small brookie streams look like nothing in an open yard, so gear that feels great on what seem like short yard casts, say 35', isnt really set up for small stream brookie casts..

the 15' small stream brookie cast looks like nothing in a yard. try sidearm short range casting under some branches in the yard, the branches are there on a stream..

and a 4pc rod is better than a 2pc rod to hike with
