Yeah, lots of explanations for lack of big fish at this time of year.

1. I hope not, but they may have died over summer. Summer hits big fish harder than little fish. And even if conditions ain't that bad, the old fish have to die sometime, and it's usually summer. By next spring a lot of the average fish will be bigger, just the natural cycle.

2. Big fish could be in the tribs breeding.

3. Even if not in the tribs, they are breeding, and less likely to be caught.

The smaller average fish size in fall is very common and is likely a combination of the above 3, we hope 2 and 3 more than 1.

There is no truth to any rumors of a loss of big fish in penns.
