I wouldn't say the fishing was over for the day when the lace snapped. I trekked miles even after it broke.

It's extremely convenient when it's not broken. And if you don't have extra buy a para cord bracelet or I have a paracord knife and make a quick lace.

Dear Idratherbe,

Wow, with that ringing endorsement you should sell them things on an infomercial.

Just one question though, isn't everything that isn't broken pretty much convenient, or are wading shoes the only thing you should pay more for and expect less from?

On the plus side at least you didn't have to carry a rebuild kit, you had special cord and a special knife handy to spare you extreme difficulty of a square knot.

Plain old laces will always work.
