Blue or gray top and silver or black strips and white bottom streamer types about three inches. Fresh water streamers will do fine-rinse them off. Sink them about a foot to a foot and a half.

This time of year the water has cooled enough the tidal fish such as reds and trout will be moving into shallow water potholes. Still be best [and least wind] on an early morning high tide. If you pick up a straggler or two keep working around in a 100 yard circle until you find the main concentration.

If you are lucky to hit an early morning tide just starting to drop concentrate on ambush points where bait fish will be leaving the security of mangroves and small creeks that will be dry on low tide.
