My ?? to you is how well do you know the insects, can you tell the difference between a b.w.o. and a blue quill..reason I'm asking is if you can identify the insects at hatching time then what do you need to know match the fly and you should get into fish.. beginning of a hatch a nymph or flymph/wet fly will work best (only a few fly's hatching) when its full swing (fish feeding in the surface) then a emerger or dry will work. then later (usually during evening) a spinner should work.
