G-man....ignorance is bliss (and you're the blithest guy I know!)

I've long since transcended ignorance and bliss and now live in a state of muted greys.

Fish. Brain the size of a pea. They eat food. If it looks liek food, they eat it.

That said, I bought the Meck "field guide," and possibly even carried it with me for a month. Then I put it away and adopted the brown/yellow/grey fly approach.

Which is, for the record, usually an Adams when the water is flat and they're mayflies or midges.
