+1 on the bootfoots being warmer than stocking foot. This time of year I try to get away with my insulated bootfoot hip waders as much as possible. I usually have no interest in wading up to my waist in the Winter anyway.

Denny - With the layers you were wearing were your feet stuffed pretty tight into your boots? If so, that's your issue. Restricts circulation and makes your feet cold. Make sure you have plenty of room to wiggle your toes, even if it means one less layer of socks/neoprene. FWIW, I wear a single pair of wool socks with both my insulated hip boots and neoprene bootie stocking foot chest waders.
