

Subject: : Warm Water & Salt Water Fly-Fishing

Topic: : Toothy Critter Success Thread

Re: Toothy Critter Success Thread

Author: : afishinado

Date: : 2012/11/22 11:25:13

URL:

Quote:

PACOFRANSICO wrote:

With muskys ya gotta be able to have a short memory, be able to let missed strikes behind ya. If ya get to pissed ya start fishing faster and not hitting the angles and the turn on your retrieves. Thats when ya pick up the fly to cast and theres a 40 staring at ya and your screwed. You have be able to turn everything off to were its just the fly, water and you. And stay there. Its stressful to be able maintain that level of concentration. To me thats what it takes to be sucessful at it.

With the exception of a few trips in the early spring, where I actually target muskies exclusively, most of my fishing is for an hour or two switching from bass fishing to try for a muskie.

I admire the dedication you guys show fishing exclusively for those beasts. It'a a lot of work, but your dedication pays off....big time! Enjoy.