What about the northern stretches? Is the condition any better further upstream or is it the whole stretch in PA that is being affected?

I have no data to prove this and it's just my opinion, but it seems to have gotten much better from Sunbury and up in the last 10 years. My buddy has a camp up in Jersey Shore and we used to catch nothing but carp(not that I have a problem with this), cats and the occasional rock bass there. It's been darn good fishin' the last few years. It seems most of the fishkills were from the Juniata down, although my favorite spots in Millersburg ain't been doin' so hot the last 3 or 4 years either.
