I use[d] the Class A list, the Wilderness Trout list and the reproduction list and then just go and explore. A lot of nice streams are at Class B level. You find these by looking for similar topographical features on the maps that matchup well with known Class A waters. Unless there is a substantial habitat issue, usually other tributaries of the receiving stream that have Class A tributaries will be also decent wild trout streams. Other than being told where to go, these methods will likely put you onto a few "hidden gems."

Well said Jack. A few posters on this site have convinced me on this approach. And as seen by my Orange hat over-shadowed by gorgeous falls, they are out there to find!
