Stag, you will need to get a brookie rod though, if you haven't already. 9 ft-er's on the little gems will never cut it. I never leave home without my 6 1/2 brookie rod. Made coincidentally by a PAFF member.

Yea .. I was meaning to get out and get a feel on smaller rods after the feedback I got in the gear section but I fracked up my foot and just haven't had much time to get a feel on them. I actually got a gift from the inlaws this weekend, orvis gift card for $200. They are high priced but unless I need other overpriced gear I may use it to purchase a rod. I figure that even tho they are overpriced the have a good rep and stand behind their product 110%. I'll see over the next few weeks what I end up getting but after the info received I think a 7'6 would be good for me and functional on brook streams as well as others .. right?
