+1 on the Laurel Highlands, the big thing there is many streams are on public land there and though some are stocked many have wild trout in them too. I was in Fayette County in '06 for over a month one spring and fished a bunch of good streams down that way and up to the Laurel Highlands, and the bonus was they all had Green Drake hatches and they were good hatches. You just have to look at the lists, there's many more options than listed above.

There's one I fished out there that my fishing partner and I caught 100 trout each on, won't say which one because I think it is mostly on private land but I wasn't sure about that. All trout caught on Coffin Flies, and we caught 3 species of trout. The only thing I'll say is it wasn't Dunbar but was a tributary to tributary to the Yough.
