Ha Paco brings up a funny story. Him and I were fishing one day and I got hung up real bad in this tree that was right in the middle of the creek and the whole was like 10 feet deep. I couldn't even remotely get my fly off. The leader actually wrapped around a limb and then buried the hook point in the branch. I was seriously just getting ready to take my waders off to go for a swim and thankfully a couple kayakers come by. The branch that I got caught on was only like 6 inches under the water so they could get it real easy or at least I thought. The guy that got it for me nearly rolled his kayak over getting it. After this and then eventually breaking a line I finally incorporated the breakpoint and it has saved me at least a half dozen times or better.
