

Subject: : Stream Reports

Topic: : Spruce Creek, Huntingdon County 11/12/2012

Re: Spruce Creek, Huntingdon County 11/12/2012

Author: : Fishidiot

Date: : 2012/11/30 10:36:54

URL:

Quote:

troutbert wrote:

Are these big rainbows actually spawning this time of year? Or are they following the spawning browns to eat eggs? I don't know the answer.

When I've seen these fish in the past on redds in Spruce, it was in the Sept time frame. I certainly can't say for sure, but the big bows certainly appeared to be the fish on the redds as no browns were visible around them. It seems to me that the fall spawning bows that I'm familiar with....seem to spawn fairly early in the fall. The bows in Big Spring for example, at least in the last few years since I've watching them, spawn in late Aug/Sept for the most part. There have been wild bows in BS for decades and I don't know if they have always spawned during this time frame. However, that's what is currently happening and it coincides with what I've seen in Spruce.