I grew up in Armstrong County, and yeah, it's not a great place for trout fishing. As far as wild trout, there's virtually nothing. A few in the Pine Creek drainage, but the populations there are too small to consider it a viable "fishery."

As for stocked fish options, there's some. Again, the Pine Creek drainage. Cherry Run is a small, stocked stream. The Redbank is bigger water and well known. Cowanshannock is well known. Much of the upper end is farmland, but in the area of the river hill it's steeper, rockier, woodsy, and has great holding water.

If talking about travelling, from the Armstrong/Butler county corridors, it's closer to the greater ANF region than it is to the Laurel Highlands.
