all rivers run to sea my friend. except sadly the Colorado which is de-watered before it reaches the gulf, which is an utter disgrace but i digress.

the susquehanna may be damned/polluted and/or too warm to allow steelhead to migrate up it in the fall, but its possible.

unlikely i admit.

and btw, all trout were once adromonous. only char were native to lakes and ponds.

landlocks were literally landlocked and all trout in ponds were planted by man at some stage.
