Jack,

Mike can answer more knowledgably than myself, obviously. But my understanding is that class A is the threshold, above which the commission considers it to be a viable wild trout sport fishery and manages it as such, and below which they do not.

All the arguments we've had about stocking over wild fish, IMO, boil down to too high a threshold. I don't think ALL wild trout streams should be unstocked, some have tiny populations and aren't capable of more, they need stockers to be a fishery at all. But I do think we stock some that we shouldn't, that would be good wild fisheries left alone. Lower the threshold, problem solved.
