Stagger,

The biggest issues are indeed YOU and your rod waving around. Line slap, shadows, etc. will all do it. As will ridiculous, wake forming drag.

That said, they are less picky about the finer aspects of presentation. That is, a little micro-drag ain't gonna be a problem, nor will a fly that lays on it's side, a tail out of proportion, etc.

Think of it this way. Trout in small infertile streams (not just brookies) are more wary about being eaten, but less wary about the things they eat.
